pot.
But confusion and disorder still reigned among the Spaniards, for Sir William Felton and his men had swept through half their camp, leaving a long litter of the dead and the dying to mark their course. Uncertain who were their attackers, and unable to tell their English enemies from their newly-arrived Breton allies, the Spanish knights rode wildly hither and thither in aimless fury. The mad tumult, the mixture of races, and the fading light, were all in favor of the four who alone knew their own purpose among the vast uncertain multitude. Twice ere they reached open ground they had to break their way through the smoke. In an instant, the pot had been plucked from the blaze, and its contents had been scooped up in half a dozen steel head-pieces, which were balanced betwixt their owner's knees, while, with spoon and goblet of bread, they devoured their morning meal.

"It is ill weather for bows," remarked John at last, when, with a long sigh he drained the last drop from his helmet. "My strings are as limp as a cow's tail this morning."

"You should rub them with water glue," quoth Johnston. "You remember Samkin, that it was wetter than this on the morning of Crecy, and yet I cannot call to mind that there was aught amiss with our strings."

"It is in my thoughts," said Black Simon, still pensively grinding his sword, "that we may have need of your strings ere sundown. I dreamed of the red cow last night."

"And what is this red cow, Simon?" asked Alleyne.

"I know not, young sir; but I can only say that on the eve of Cadsand, and on the eve of Crecy, and on the eve of Nogent, I dreamed of a red cow; and now the dream has come upon me again, so I am now setting a very keen edge to my blade."

"Well said, old war-dog!" cried Ayward. "By my hit! I pray that your dream may come true, for the prince hath not set us out here to drink broth or to gather whortleberries. One more fight, and I am ready to hang up my bow, marry a wife, and take to the fire corner. But how now, Robin? Whom is it that you seek?"

"The Lord Loring craves your attendance in his tent," said a young archer to Alleyne.

"I know not, young sir; but I can only say that on the eve of Cadsand, and on the eve of Crecy, and on the eve of Nogent, I dreamed of a red cow; and now the dream has come upon me again, so I am now setting a very keen edge to my blade."

"Later, Sir Oliver," answered the old soldier, wiping his grimed face. "We must further into the mountains ere we be in safety. But what have we here, Nigel?"

"It is in my thoughts," said Black Simon, still pensively grinding his sword, "that we may have need of your strings ere sundown. I dreamed of the red cow last night."

"It is a prisoner whom I have taken, and in sooth, as he came from the royal tent and wears the royal arms upon his jupon, I trust that he is the King of Spain."

"The King of Spain!" cried the companions, crowding round in amazement.

"Nay, Sir Nigel," said Felton, peering at the prisoner through the uncertain light. "I have twice seen Henry of Transtamare, and certes this man in no way resembles him."

"Then, by the light of heaven! I will ride back for him," cried Sir Nigel.

"Nay, now, the camp is in arms, and it would be rank madness. Who are you, fellow?" he added, in Spanish, "and ho! is it that you dare to wear the arms of Castile?"

The prisoner was bent recovering the consciousness which had been squeezed from him by the grip of Hordle John.

"If it please you," he answered, "I and nine others are the body-squires of the king, and must ever wear his arms, so as to shield him even such perils as have threatened him this night. The King is at the tent of the brave Du Guesclin, where he will sup to-night. But I am a caballero of Aragon, Don Sanchez Penellos, and, though I be no king, I am yet ready to pay a fitting price for my ransom."

"By Saint Paul! I will not touch your gold," cried Sir Nigel. "Go back to your master and give him greeting from Sir Nigel Loring, Knight Constable of Twynham Castle, by the hand of Christopher, the servant of God at the Priory of Christchurch."

"So I read it," said Sir Nigel. "Now I pray you to read what is set forth within."

Alleyne turned to the letter, and, as his eyes rested upon it, his face turned pale and a cry of surprise and grief burst from his lips.

"What then?" asked the knight, peering up at him anxiously. "There is naught amiss with the Lady Mary or with the Lady Maude."

"It is my brother—my poor unhappy brother!" cried Alleyne, with his hand to his brow. "He is dead."

"By Saint Paul! I have never heard that he had shown so much love for you that you should mourn him so."

"Yet he was my brother—the only kith or kin that I had upon earth. Mayhap he had cause to be bitter against me, for his land was given to the abbey for my upbringing. Alas! alas! and I raised my state against him when last we met. He has been slain—and slain, I fear, amidst crime and violence."

"Ha!" said Sir Nigel. "Read on, I pray you to read what is set forth within."

It was but a hundred paces, and yet ere he had crossed it every Bowman was ready at his horse's head, and the group of knights were out and listening intently to the ominous sound.

"It is a great body of horse," said Sir William, "and they are riding very swiftly, hitherwards."

"Yet they must be from the prince's army," remarked Sir Richard Caution.

"For they come from the north."

"Nay," said the Earl of Angus, "it is not so certain; for the peasant with whom we spoke last night said that it was rumored that Don Tello, the Spanish king's brother, had ridden with six thousand chosen men to beat up the prince's camp. It may be that on their backward road they have come this way."

"By St. Paul!" cried Sir Nigel. "I think that it is even as you say, for that same peasant had a sour face and a shifting eye, as one who bore us little good will. I doubt not that he has brought these cavaliers upon us."

"But the mist covers us," said Sir Simon Burley. "We have yet time to ride through the further end of the pass."

"Were we a troop of mountain goats we might do so," answered Sir William Felton, "but it is not to be passed by a company of horsemen. If these be indeed Don Tello and his men, then we must bide where we are, and do what we can to make them rue the day that they found us in their path."

"Well spoken, William!" cried Sir Nigel, in high delight. "If there be so many as has been said, then there will be much honor to be gained from them and every hope of advancement. But the sound has ceased, and I fear that they have gone some other way."

"Or mayhap they have come to the mouth of the gorge, and are marshaling their ranks. Hush and hearken! for they are no great way from us."

The Company stood peering into the dense fog-wreath, amidst a silence so profound that the dripping of the water from the rocks and the breathing of the horses grew loud upon the ear.

Suddenly from out the sea of mist came the shrill sound of a neigh, followed by a long blast upon a bugle.

"It is a Spanish call, my fair lord," said Black Simon. "It is used by their prickers and bummers when the beast hath not fled, but is still in its lair."

"By my faith!" said Sir Nigel, smiling. "If they are in a humor for veneration, we may promise them some sport ere they sound the mort over us. But there is a hill in the centre of the gorge on which we might take our stand."

"I marked it yesterday-night," said Felton.

"I marked it yesterday-night," said Felton, "and no better spot could be found for our purpose, for it is very steep at the back. It is but a bow-shot to the left, and, indeed, I can see the shadow of it."

The whole Company, leading their horses, passed across to the small hill which loomed in front of them out of the mist.

It was indeed admirably designed for defense, for it sloped down in front, all jagged and bouldered-strenuous, while it fell away behind in a sheer cliff of a hundred feet or more. On the summit was a small uneven plateau, with a stretch across of a hundred paces and a depth of half as much again.

"Unloose the horses!" said Sir Nigel.

"We have no space for them, and if we hold our own we shall have horses to spare when this day's work is done.

Nay, keep yours, my fair sirs, for we may have work for them. Ayward,

Johnston, let your men form a harrow on either side of the ridge. Sir Oliver and you, my lord Angus, I give the right wing, and the left, to you, Sir Simon, and to you, Sir Richard Caution.

I and Sir William Felton will hold the centre with our men-at-arms. Now order the ranks and fling wide the banners, for our souls are God's and our bodies the king's, and our swords for

Saint George and for England!"

Sir Nigel pondered for a few moments, and then burst out a-laughing.

"By St. Paul!" said he. "I know not why I should mix in this matter, for I have ever found that the Lady Maude was very well able to look to her own affairs. Since first she could stamp her little foot, she hath ever been able to get that for which she craved; and if she set her heart on thee, Alleyne, and thou on her, I do not think that this Spanish king, with his three-score thousand men, could hold you apart.

Yet this I will say, that I would see you a full knight ere you go to my daughter with words of love. I know not, young sir, do you have a cowardly heart in you, to let me know that you have used me ill."

"Nay, my fair lord, say not so; for I know not whether your daughter loves me, and there is no pledge between us."

Sir Nigel pondered for a few moments, and then burst out a-laughing.

"By St. Paul!" said he. "I know not why I should mix in this matter, for I have ever found that the Lady Maude was very well able to look to her own affairs. Since first she could stamp her little foot, she hath ever been able to get that for which she craved; and if she set her heart on thee, Alleyne, and thou on her, I do not think that this Spanish king, with his three-score</

WASHINGTON NEWS

THE MEXICAN AND COWBOY AFFAIR.

Governor of Arizona Requests That a Company of Troops be Ordered to The Scene of Hostilities—Germany Has a New Name For Trusts—Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The Secretary of War has just received a telegram from Gov. Murphy, of Arizona, saying that considerable trouble has occurred at Naco, on the border, between Arizona and Mexico, between American cowboys and Mexican officers.

He recommends that a company of troops be ordered there from Fort Huachuca to remain until the trouble has subsided.

He says that the civil officers will do everything possible to maintain order, but will not be able to do so.

Germany's Name For Trusts.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Consul-General Richard Guenther has sent to the State Department, from Frankfort, a translation from a recent issue of a German trade paper relative to trusts in Germany. The article says: "For industries in Germany, the last few years have been an era of rings. In this matter Germany has not taken the lead, but she is following with increased eagerness the example given by more advanced countries. During recent years, a number of new industrial rings were founded or their organization was planned. Thus, in 1888, there were founded the unions of iron-wire manufacturers, of wooden goods manufacturers, of iron goods dealers, of wall-paper manufacturers, of sheet-iron manufacturers, of cloth dealers, of asphaltum manufacturers, of yarn consumers, of cotton-yarn consumers, of indigo exporters, &c."

As to the effectiveness of the rings in the textile industry during the past year, the following is reported:

"The union for promoting the German linen and nosery industry has been able to develop very satisfactory activity in the interests of its members in the political field. The efforts of the union to promote the interests of the textile industry at Crefeld were more in the field of art industry. The union of German wall-paper manufacturers has been able to keep up to its agreement in every respect. The same applies also to the convention of manufacturers of dressmakers' busts at Berlin, which is in indirect connection with the textile branch. The commercial political relation of the union of yarn consumers merits special consideration."

It is known that the German spinners desire on the conclusion of new commercial treaties, to again have the yarn duties raised. This intention is seconded by the influential protective union, but since notwithstanding the high customs duty, it has not so far been possible to manufacture the finer yarns in Germany in competition with Great Britain, the yarn consumers fear from an increase of customs duties serious injury to their export interests. Their endeavors, therefore, are directed to preventing the increase of the duties and, if possible, to obtaining facilities for the import, as they cannot refrain from importing from Great Britain."

Big Orders For Steel Rails.

New York, Oct. 26.—There has come to light the fact that an agreement as to price has been made among the steel rail manufacturers of the country, and that the first result is the immediate booking of orders for delivery in 1900, of steel rails worth $50,000,000. To fill these contracts will require nearly one-fifth of the entire steel production of the country, all to be manufactured into steel rails, which is a single branch of a great industry. And the new prices! They range from $25 to $40 a ton, as compared with $18 a ton for steel rails in 1897, when the big steel rail pool collapsed.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR.

Hundreds of Portsmouth citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsements, the public expression of Portsmouth people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Portsmouth reader.

Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in faraway places. Read the following:

Mr. William Bell of No. 3 Hill street says: "I used Doon's Kidney Pills and sold my husband. Both of us received great benefit from them, and we unite in recommending them to other. We read about them in the newspapers, and as we were both suffering at the same time, we got a box at Phillips' pharmacy on Congress street. I was troubled with a grinding pain in my back, dizziness and distress in my head, and lameness in my kidneys. My husband had lameness in the back and the seizures from the kidneys acted frequently, particularly at night, when greatly disturbed by rest. I have occupied all the strong positions on the road to Ladysmith and I have no further anxiety about them. I have received from Lieutenant Kendrick, Signaling Officer of the Queen's regiment who has ridden in, and also from Colonel Dartnell of the Natal police, who accompanied the column, the best accounts of the spirits and efficiency of the troops, who are very anxious to meet the enemy again."

A dispatch from Maseru says Commissioner Lagden has started to meet Lerethodi and other Basuto chiefs at Putatsi River, where the chiefs have assembled at the request of Lerethodi to pledge their loyalty to the Queen.

THE TRANSVAAL WAR

ANOTHER BATTLE EXPECTED AT ANY TIME.

The Important Engagement Fought Near Ladysmith—Transvaal Issues a Proclamation in Regard to Territory Claimed—The Inhabitants of Douglas Ask Protection.

London, Oct. 26.—The War Office has made public the following dispatch, sent by Gen. White, received from Ladysmith Wednesday evening.

"The advance guard of the force sent out by me this morning to get in touch with and help General Yule's column was within three miles of that column, which had temporarily halted at Sunday River, about noon. I have occupied all the strong positions on the road to Ladysmith and I have no further anxiety about them. I have received from Lieutenant Kendrick, Signaling Officer of the Queen's regiment who has ridden in, and also from Colonel Dartnell of the Natal police, who accompanied the column, the best accounts of the spirits and efficiency of the troops, who are very anxious to meet the enemy again."

A dispatch from Maseru says Commissioner Lagden has started to meet Lerethodi and other Basuto chiefs at Putatsi River, where the chiefs have assembled at the request of Lerethodi to pledge their loyalty to the Queen.

Was a Hand Battle.

Ladysmith, Natal, Oct. 26.—The fight made by General White, seven miles from here to cover General Yule's march to Ladysmith, was short and savage. Worst of it was between Boers and natives.

Boers outnumbering British began extending their lines so as to turn British left flank. The Devonshire men were at the extreme left of line. Long low hills sort of separated them and the force immediately opposed, from the rest of the battle.

The death list will be increased largely. Flocks of sheep without their herders have been reported from various points in the storm district and later these will be traced and the dead herders found.

Now the snow covers up everything on the prairie, and the coulees many of them more than 100 feet deep and with steep sides, are filled with it. This was the most severe October storm ever occurring in Montana.

FAITHFUL IN DEATH.

Full Story of the Awful Montana Blizzard.

Great Falls, Mont., Oct. 26.—As a result of the recent blizzard which swept through Teton County in the northern part of the State, nine men are now known to be dead, and of these, five bodies have been recovered. With one exception all were sheep herders, and all were found lying in such positions as to indicate that they had remained with their flocks to the last, dying in their attempt to save the property of their employers.

William Graham, working for the Cascade Land Company, was found in a coulee near Healy Butte. It is evident that he had tried hard through the night to get his sheep into camp, but had not succeeded. Conscious of the death impending he returned to his tent about midnight, and there wrote a note saying he was exhausted, but was about to return to the sheep. He was found stretched on the snow, his lantern about twenty feet distant. Of his two dogs, one remained to guard the body and the other followed the sheep.

Norman Bruce worked for William Flowerer. He remained with his sheep until he managed to drive them into a sheltered spot where they would be safe. Blinded by the storm, he failed to find the coulee where his cabin was built and wandered up another.

He went to Havana on Dec. 1, Col. Rathbone continued, "and took charge of the postal service on Jan. 1. We have now in the postal service on the island 600 employees, 500 of whom are Cubans. The Americans are employed chiefly to act as aids to the Cubans."

I found a postal system that was bad at the best, badly administered and disrupted by war. There was little left of it in fact. This necessitated the rebuilding of the whole system from the ground up. We introduced several new features, the most important of which were the money order and registration. Under the Spanish rule they had a sort of registration, called certificado, but it was nothing like our perfect system of registration.

The money order system has met with great favor. Since April, when it was introduced, between $200,000 and $3,000,000 has been remitted to the United States by money order.

The Cubans have the greatest confidence in the system. This is shown by the fact that the merchants and bankers of Havana are now making use of it to the extent of about $125,000 a day.

I am better pleased with the Cubans than I expected to be. I was told that they were stupid and lazy, but I have found that they are not.

They are lethargic, but that is because of the climate. An American who has been down there six months feels as though he would like to have some one put on his shoes for him."

Col. Rathbone spoke of the excellent sanitary condition of Havana, and of the good work done by McCullagh in organizing a police force.

CUBA'S NEW REGIME.

UNCLE SAM SEEMS TO BE ON DECK.

Efforts to Work Cubans Into The Government Service of Different Branches are Successful—The Entire Postal System Was Rebuilt From the Ground Up.

New York, Oct. 26.—Col. E. G. Rathbone, postmaster general of Cuba, has arrived here from Havana on the Ward Line steamship Havana. He expects to return to Havana with his family in three weeks.

Col. Rathbone says that the postal system in Cuba has been vastly improved during the United States' occupation of the island, and although it is not as perfect as the service here, it is already thoroughly efficient. What is more, the Cubans have learned to put confidence in it and are using it freely. It is the policy of the administration, Col. Rathbone says, to work the Cubans into the government service as far as possible. This has been done in the Havana police force and has been done in the postal service.

I went to Havana on Dec. 1, Col. Rathbone continued, "and took charge of the postal service on Jan. 1. We have now in the postal service on the island 600 employees, 500 of whom are Cubans. The Americans are employed chiefly to act as aids to the Cubans."

I found a postal system that was bad at the best, badly administered and disrupted by war. There was little left of it in fact. This necessitated the rebuilding of the whole system from the ground up. We introduced several new features, the most important of which were the money order and registration.

Under the Spanish rule they had a sort of registration, called certificado, but it was nothing like our perfect system of registration.

The money order system has met with great favor. Since April, when it was introduced, between $200,000 and $3,000,000 has been remitted to the United States by money order.

The Cubans have the greatest confidence in the system. This is shown by the fact that the merchants and bankers of Havana are now making use of it to the extent of about $125,000 a day.

I am better pleased with the Cubans than I expected to be. I was told that they were stupid and lazy, but I have found that they are not.

They are lethargic, but that is because of the climate. An American who has been down there six months feels as though he would like to have some one put on his shoes for him."

Col. Rathbone spoke of the excellent sanitary condition of Havana, and of the good work done by McCullagh in organizing a police force.

Sight Restored After Forty Years.

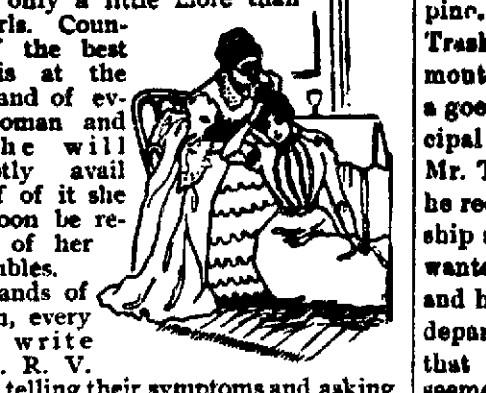

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Edward O. Osgood of Angelica, who has been blind for forty years has fully recovered his sight through the removal of a cataract. Osgood was married in 1869 and Wednesday for the first time he saw his wife and children. Plans are being made for a reunion of the eleven children, several of whom are married and live at a distance from the old home. The happy man has not become acquainted fully with the members of his family by sight, frequently mistaking them for neighbors when not hearing them speak.

WRECKED ON THE IRISH COAST.

CHESTER, Mass., Oct. 26.—The famous fishing schooner Ethel B. Jacobs of this port is a total loss. The vessel, which was owned and commanded by the crack fisherman, Captain Sol Jacobs, was wrecked on Abbey island, Barrenname, Ireland. News of the disaster was received here today by cablegram to H. L. Follansbee & Co. No particulars were received beyond the statement that the crew were saved. It is supposed that the schooner was driven ashore in a gale and went to pieces on the rocky shore of the island. The Ethel B. Jacobs was well known from Hatteras to Labrador. She was one of the most completely equipped fishing vessels on the Atlantic and her sailing power was such that Captain Sol seldom worried about the Canadian cruisers guarding the three-mile limit off the Nova Scotia coast. Captain Jacobs was usually the first to land the earliest mackerel catch of the season. Last August he sailed for the mackerel fishing grounds off the Irish coast, but he was obliged to return home before the close of the season on account of the illness of his wife. The vessel was left in charge of Captain Cluett. The Jacobs was built in Essex in 1891. With her outfit she was valued at $14,000 and was insured for $10,500.

If all young women could have the right sort of motherly advice much of the unhappiness of the world would be avoided. There are two troubles in the way. The girls hesitate to consult the mothers and the mothers really know only a little more than the girls. Counsel of the best sort is at the command of every woman and if she will promptly avail herself of it she will soon be relieved of her troubles. Thousands of women, every year, write to Dr. R. V. Pierce telling their symptoms and asking his advice, which is freely given without cost.

For over thirty years Dr. Pierce has been and is to-day chief consulting physician of the great Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. He is a specialist in the diseases of women and his "Favorite Prescription" has had the greatest sale of all medicines ever devised for the cure of the troubles peculiarly feminine.

Every letter addressed to Dr. Pierce is held sacredly confidential and has the most careful attention.

No testimonial letter is ever published until the written consent of its author has been given.

Mrs. Mary E. Lewis, of Tanner, Glimer Co., W. Va., writes: "For fifteen years I suffered under misery. I had given up all hope of ever getting well again. I slept little, ate little, everything I ate would almost cramp me to death. Was very nervous and could hardly walk across the room. Only weighed sixteen pounds when I commenced taking these medicines. Now weigh one hundred and forty pounds and feel better than ever before. I have taken the 'Favorite Prescription,' the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the 'Pellies' I take great pleasure in recommending your medicine to others. It would not have been living if it had not been for you. I am very thankful to God, who put the great power in your medicines that cured me."

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT'S WILL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The petition for the probating of the will of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, the citation directed to the members of the Vanderbilt family and the waiver of citation of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., were filed in the surrogate's office this afternoon. The will was not filed. Senator Depew tonight gave out a statement of the terms of the will of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt. It shows that the fortune is estimated at $70,000,000.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt will get about $50,000,000. He thus becomes the head of the family. The will gives Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., about $1,500,000. It gives to each of the remaining brothers and sisters about $7,500,000, Alfred, of course, not included. Out of a spirit of affection and for the purpose of satisfying all the members of the family, Alfred gives his brother, Cornelius, enough of his inheritance to make his portion equal to that of the other members, namely, $7,500,000. Senator Depew says that Cornelius Vanderbilt has accepted this arrangement in the spirit in which it was offered.

RELEASED FROM QUARANTINE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Major General Fitz Hugh Lee, who arrived on the steamship Havana on Wednesday, was released from quarantine this afternoon. General Lee looked to be in perfect health. He said: "Ask me about the Boer war; ask me about the coming elections; but don't ask me about Cuba or annexation."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Frank A. Vanderlip, chairman of the Dewey home committee, has received the following letter from the admiral:

My heart is full of gratitude to them for this overwhelming expression of their regard for me, and I request that you will also accept and convey to the committee my heartfelt thanks for your and their efforts.

Very sincerely yours,
GEORGE DEWEY.

WILL RECEIVE CAREFUL ATTENTION.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The resolutions adopted at a mass meeting in New York on Oct. 11th, urging the president to offer the friendly services of the United States in mediating between Great Britain and the Transvaal and Orange Free State republics, were presented to the president today by a delegation from New York. The president informed the committee that he would give the matter his careful attention.

SPAIN'S GREATEST NEED

Mr. R. P. Olivia, of Barcelona, Spain, spends his winters at Aiken, S.C. Weak nerves had caused severe pains in the back of his head. On using Electric Bitters, America's greatest Blood and Nerve Remedy, all pain soon left him. He says this grand medicine is what his country needs. All America knows that it cures liver and kidney trouble, purifies the blood, tones up the stomach, strengthens the nerves, puts vim, vigor and new life in every muscle, nerve and organ of the body. If weak, tired or ailing you need it. Every bottle guaranteed, only 50 cents. Sold by Globe Grocery Co.

Manchester in particular and Hillsborough county in general would be in clover if they had as fine a court house as Rockingham county possesses in Portsmouth. Not only is the Rockingham court house a fine looking building from the outside, but the interior is architecturally quite beautiful and the conveniences are the most modern. Hillsborough county has a court house room that is exceeded by any moderate sized barn in the county. A good many barns are superior, as whenever you enter into them stands some show of getting out without an attack of pneumonia.

GOOD STORY OF TRASK, AND A TRUE ONE.

The popular Jules Trask is probably in Manila by this time, and in measuring the human nature of the artful Filippino. Nowhere in the state is Mr. Trask more popular than in Portsmouth, and his friends in that city tell a good story in which Jules is the principal figure, that will bear repeating. Mr. Trask was in Portsmouth the day he received his notification that a clerkship at Manila was at his disposal, if he wanted it. He had been to Washington and had seen the dignitaries in the naval department, and had built every fence that he could think of, and results seemed to come slowly. On the day in question, he sat in a newspaper office in Portsmouth, and was pretty well disengaged. He said to a friend that he guessed he'd have to go back "up north" and saw wood the coming winter.

While he was talking the matter over rather disconsolately, a messenger boy came into the editor's office, looked around to see who was there, rather slowly read off the name on the envelope, and asked: "Is Julian Trask here?" Mr. Trask allowed he was, and took the telegram and opened it. The message was from Washington and wanted to know if he would take a clerkship at Manila at a certain good salary.

The moment had come. A smile spread over his countenance, and rising from his chair, Jules said: "Well, would I t-take it? I'd t-take a job for t-tthat salary anywhere t-tthis side of Hades!"

And he answered the telegram.—Manchester Union.

A SURVEY OF THE LATEST NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Some High Priced Gowns—Dress for a Bride—A Pretty Evening Gown That May Be Made at Home—Hats and Lace—The Fashion in Furs.

(New York Fashion Letter.)

I have just come from a tour of the shops, filled at present with a bewildering array of colors and textures.

It is a matter for the psychologist to explain why it is that the most gorgeous creations have always an admiring group of plainly dressed women lingering about them. Not one woman in a hundred could wear the conceptional frock were it kind fairy godmother to appear on the scene with a needful roll of bills. Is it because each one of us has hidden under the conventional veneer a remnant of our barbaric ancestors? Whatever the reason, the suitable tailor-made gowns are tucked away in a corner and are only sought when shiny seams and frayed bindings force us to replace our old standby with a new one.

The gown which sent me off philosophizing was a resplendent black robe of net so completely covered with glittering spangles that the modest sum of $225 seemed inadequate for splendor flashy enough to suit a Choctaw maiden.

Quite unnoticed near was a truly artistic gown of broadcloth. The skirt was in tulip form and trimmed with an applique of white silk edged with silver. Three saucy shaped ruffles finished the bottom of the skirt which was, of course, long and clinging. The waist was very simple, the vest of spangled chiffon being outlined with the same applique.

Apropos of broadcloth, I wish you could have seen the charming gown a bride will wear at an morning wedding. Over a foundation skirt of white taffeta is hung one of white broadcloth, cut out in a most beautiful design and appliqued to silk net of the same shade by a row of stitching. The beauty of the whole is in the design which starts in straight lines from the waist and loses itself in curves and scrolls and scallops, giving the effect of a rare and heavy lace.

But for the sake of a girl who can not secure the services of a high-priced modiste, I will tell you of a pretty evening dress any clever needlewoman can make herself with the aid of a home dressmaker.

Have first a perfectly hanging skirt of taffeta. Over this hang one of net of exactly the same shade and shape. Trim the skirt with three ruffles of the net, each edged with a tiny ruche of chiffon. The drapery consists of a long pointed apron over skirt with a sash tied in a simple bow in the back. The apron is edged with satin ribbon two inches wide, then three rows of very narrow ribbon, then a wide row, so alternating to the waist. The bodice is in mass of fluffy ruffles, each finished with the ruche of chiffon.

Whether the empire gown will follow close in the track of the poke bonnet, remains to be seen, but these capacious specimens of headwear with bewitching strings of tulle are seen everywhere in the shops.

Hats of fur will be very fashionable as soon as the weather permits, and a favorite trimming is tulle. A round hat of chinchilla has as its sole trimming a cleverly simulated breast made of white tulle. Another of sable had a rosette of tulle of the same shade.

Lace is worn everywhere on everything. Whole gowns are made of it; trim hats, blouses and wraps.

It is a good plan to arrange for fur garments now, for just as soon as the winter months are here the buyer will be obliged to take just what is offered and at high prices. No garment is more becoming to a young face, nor more youth-giving to one growing old, than that which has for its principal trimming the soft, pretty fur of those little animals that furnish us with our choicest and most expensive covering.

To buy cheap furs is like throwing money into the street. To buy good furs requires a fortune, so that a woman who owns beautiful furs is, indeed, to be envied. There is just as much change in the fashioning of fur as in any other garment, though one would hardly imagine such would be the case.

Furs, like all other garments, ripple and flare this winter. The long cloaks have full jabs of fur down the front, and the capes though tight fitting, around the neck below the shoulders they display the same disposition to ripple in flare as the skirts do.

Victories of chinchilla are enlivened by mink velvet bows in any color to suit the buyer's fancy. These victories are short shoulder capes, with high, flaring collars and long narrow stole ends.

Persian lamb jackets are shorter and much more expensive this year than last. One style is finished around the bottom with the deep scallops which are so much in favor at present, and has a very high flaring collar and large revers of chinchilla.

For boas, victories and muffs the favorite furs this coming winter will be silver fox, Russian sable, Hudson Bay sable, and chinchilla. In coats moire Persian lamb and seal. The short coats are very short, not more than twenty-one to twenty-six inches, and the long coats are fifty-three inches. There will therefore be no three-quarter lengths in fur garments. Mink is also a very favorite fur, taking second rank in the fur market.

In fox furs the rarest and costliest is that of the silver fox, and, although it is found on two continents, on an average only about two thousand skins are annually secured. The fur is soft and silvery, and is principally used for muffs and trimmings. The darkest skins are most valuable. The cross fox ranks next in the commercial scale. The darkest skins are hardly to be distinguished from those of the lighter silver fox.

AGNES OLcott.

A woman of perfect figure should weigh 138 pounds and be five feet five inches tall. She should measure five feet five inches from the tip of one middle finger to the tip of the other when the arms are extended. The length of the hand ought to be just one-tenth of this, and one-seventh should be the length of the foot.

FOR LASTING BEAUTY.

Rules for Women Who Would Remain Youthful.

She has passed thirty-five. She realizes an unpleasant truth, says a woman writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer. A skin once as soft as a piece of fine-grained satin has grown coarse. There are incipient signs of wrinkles. Eyes are heavy-lidded and dark circles are settling beneath them. Tiny rolls of flesh show above the throat. Something must be done. First a clean bill of health. This means early hours, light diet, plenty of exercise, and clothing neither too tight nor too weighty. Walk she must, and walk she does. First a tramp of a mile. Each day the distance lengthens until a five-mile sprint is a parody on exercise. Hot and cold baths and physical culture. Massaging, too, over the face and under the chin, massage that counts for something. The habit of worrying is dropped. Starchy foods are carefully avoided. Sweets tabooed. Ten hours' sleep are rarely missed. Hot water by the gallon. Cold shower baths by the dozens.

In twelve short weeks behold a change, and such a change. The flabby skin grows firmer. The sallow skin grows whiter. Lauguid lids no longer sleepily droop over the eyes that are dull. Delicate curves are reavated. The complexion grows clearer, finer grained and tinged with a delicate flush. Well groomed is a verdict by all brought in contact with this woman who has discovered in the nick of time the secret of perpetual good looks.

Ladies' Golf Cape.

The golf cape is one of the most comfortable garments worn and if made of modest material and trimmed with taste, it will answer for more dressy occasions. The garment shown is made with revers which may be thrown back as indicated. The illustration will give one an idea of the general effect—the collar, the flare and the length. Material and trimming may be left to the taste of the wearer.

Gargling Is Quite Useless.

One of the most cherished tenets of the household school of medicine is that gargling with a mixture of vinegar and water is good for a sore throat. Now come physicians with their cold science to say not only that the vinegar and water is useless, but that the whole idea of gargling is ineffective and ridiculous.

In brief, they say that gargling is of no utility because not a drop of the liquid used ever gets further than the middle of the tongue. They appear to be able to prove this statement to be true.

The whole therapeutic value of gargling depends upon whether the fluid used reaches the mucous membrane of the pharynx and tonsils or not. The scientists who have been testing the matter declare that a liquid cannot reach the tonsils or back of the throat because the air expelled by the lungs in the effort of gargling, as well as the shape assumed by the velum, throws the liquid away from the very parts it is supposed to reach.

More headaches are the result of defective eyesight than one ever dreamed of.

Dark glasses are not becoming, but this has not deterred the sensible woman from caring for her precious sight. Grandma's old-time remedy of camphor water for inflamed and weary eyes has been adopted by an authority on toilet matters. The preparations are: Camphor water—not spirits of camphor—two ounces; borax, two grains.

Shuts the Eyes to Sin.

For the last three years Miss Sarah Cunningham, of Vancouver, B. C., has blundered her eyes whenever she stepped outside the door of the little cottage in which she lives alone. Miss Cunningham is a woman about forty years old. For years her conscience was troubled by the sights of sin and immorality everywhere visible as she walked the streets of Vancouver. Finally she decided that she could stand it no longer. If she could not put a stop to the wickedness which oppressed her she could at least shut her eyes to the outside world. Consequently she bandaged her eyes. Since that day in 1890 her eyes have never looked upon the earth. As a result Miss Cunningham reports that she is becoming cheerful. The bright side of life now occupies her mind, and though she is aware of the fact that there is still sin in the world it does not trouble her as it formerly did.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry, add sugar gradually and continue beating, then add flavoring, fat and cold cream, starch, flour, salt and cream tartar, mixed and sifted. Bake 45 to 50 minutes in an ungreased angel cake pan in a moderate oven.

THE HOUSEHOLD

KITCHEN COMFORT.

Useless Expenditure of Muscles and Nerve Force.

Observation of the domestic arrangements of many homes has shown me, says a writer in the Ohio Farmer, that there is much useless expenditure of nerve force and muscles. My heart aches for the women who year after year patiently drudge to make a comfortable home for the family and grow prematurely old and gray in the service when really much of it is unnecessary.

The present age offers hosts of help, but that does not intrude on the family privacy demanding to be "one of 'em;" that does not break the chin, nor mark her presence by daubs of grease; that does not stain doors or leave them wide open; that does not sing at the top of her voice just when you are trying to enjoy the coveted hour for a bit of reading or a short nap. Better still, these helps are always ready, never ill, never "back-bach," and do not cost as much in five years as you would pay for the services of the average "lived girl," in six months. The saving of time and strength means a great deal to a woman in the course of a lifetime, and anything that will do that is a real help.

One of the greatest helps I know of in housekeeping is a sharp knife, and three sharp knives are still better, one for carving, one for bread and one for paring vegetables. A few turns on the grindstone once a week keeps away the dullness, and a little oil stone to be had for ten cents puts on a fine smooth edge.

Another rare and useful article is a Japanned tin server for carrying dishes, which can be purchased for from ten to twenty cents, quite good enough for ordinary service, and saves miles of walking in the course of a year, to say nothing of time. With it one can set a table elaborately for a dozen in two, with at most three trips from pantry to dining-room, and it saves much climbing of those troublesome cellar stairs. Because the broad, flat tray assures safety in bringing up cream, butter and other things all at once.

One or two narrow shelves fastened to the wall near the stove and within easy reach of the hand saves many steps while cooking meals. If you haven't any, the next time you go to town visit a carpenter shop and have a shelf made to fit your space. One six inches wide and three feet long will be a convenient size. Have the carpenter attach stout iron brackets just far enough apart to be securely fastened to the studing, and underneath tie shelf have him put a row of brass cup hooks about three inches apart and one inch from the back edge of the shelf. Here you can hang up the numberless small articles, such as iron spoons, large forks, small strainer, potato masher, holders, etc. A small curtain can be added to the shelf to conceal them from view. The whole need not cost more than fifty cents and in many places can be obtained for half that sum.

I have often wondered why the kitchen windows are never let down from the top. Everywhere I have noticed the lower sash raised as high as it will go, but never the upper one lowered an inch. Heat, smoke and steam always rise to the ceiling, and then finding no outlet trail their odorous way all through the house. Try opening a window at the top on opposite sides of the kitchen and see what a wonderful difference it will make, not only in temperature and comfort to yourself, but in dissipating the unpleasant smells arising from washing or cooking.

How often is time and patience lost while hunting for a piece of string or a bit of wrapping paper! You can prevent it by buying a yard of blue denim; tear off a strip six inches wide from one end for small pockets. Then both ends of the long piece and fold one end back on the other twelve inches for a wide, deep pocket to place the neatly folded pieces of wrapping paper that may be saved from time to time. On the space above it fit small pockets to hold the ball of string, the package of tacks, and arrange a couple of small loops at one side just long enough and far enough apart to firmly hold the handle of a small hammer. Tack it to the inside of the pantry door, and in a month you will wonder how you ever managed to do without it.

PUMPKIN PIES.

Money In Making Them If They are Palatable.

Farmers' wives who wish to earn a little money are unaware that pumpkin pies will find a ready and profitable market in the cities, and especially is this the case at Thanksgiving time and during the holidays. True one may buy pumpkin pies at the bake shops purporting to be the real old-fashioned articles, but they neither look the same nor taste the same. There are numbers of persons with such lively and delightful memory of the pies "mother" use to make, that taste one in any way like them is considered a rare treat indeed.

In preparing pumpkin for pies and puddings, it is nice baked as well as stewed, and decidedly less trouble, as there is no danger of its burning. When possible, use a steamer to boil the pumpkin. Deep pie plates should always be used. A shallow pumpkin pie is a delusion and a snare.

Pumpkin Pie No 1: Pare and grate raw pumpkin. To each pint of the grated pumpkin add 1 qt. milk, 2 cups sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon extract cinnamon, a little ground nutmeg and 3 well-beaten eggs. Bake in a pan lined with puff paste.

Pumpkin Pie No 2: Cut the pumpkin in halves, divide into rather small pieces, remove the seeds, and bake in the oven until done. Then scrape from the shell and rub through a colander. To 1 1/2 pints of the cooked pumpkin add 1 qt. hot sweet milk, 1/2 cup sugar, and the well beaten yolks of 3 eggs; beat well together, add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs, and beat thoroughly again. Flavor to suit the taste and bake in a pan lined with puff paste.

Pumpkin Pie Without Eggs: Prepare the pumpkin as previously directed. For two pies heat 1 1/2 pints milk in a double boiler, and when almost boiling stir into it 2 scant tablespoons flour rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Let boil until it thickens, stirring often. Add 1/2 cup sugar to 1/2 pints of the sifted pumpkin and after beating well together, stir this into the hot milk. Bake in one crust.

Pumpkin Pie Without Eggs, No. 2: To 1 qt. of cooked pumpkin add 1 lb. sugar, a lump of butter, 1 pt. sweet cream, and flavor with ground cinnamon. Bake in rich pastry.

THE DAHLGREN HERB.

New Torpedo Boat Comes Into Port This Morning.

Choppy Sea Outside And She Will Stay Over Night.

The latest addition to Uncle Sam's fine torpedo boat flotilla, the Dahlgren, fresh from the Bath Iron works, came gliding up the harbor this forenoon and shortly before 12 o'clock tied up at C. E. Walker's wharf. She has been viewed by a large number of people, thanks to the bulletin announcing her arrival posted by the Herald within ten minutes after she made fast.

The Dahlgren left Bath this morning for an hour's continuous run at sea, to establish an official record. At the end of her spurt she found herself off Boone island and put in here for coal.

It was very rough outside, with indications of an approaching storm and the Dahlgren will probably remain here until the weather conditions become more favorable.

The Dahlgren is 151 feet long, 16 feet 6 inches beam, 10 feet deep, and 4 feet 8 inches draught. She has a displacement of 150 tons, and is about the same size as the Foote, Rodgers and Winslow—United States torpedo boats 3, 4 and 5—but whereas the latter vessels have machinery capable of indicating only 2000 horse power, the Dahlgren's triple expansion engines of the Norward type have developed more than 4200 horse power.

The torpedo boat is in charge of Capt. Charles Blair, under the supervision of Vice President and Superintendent John S. Hyde of the Bath Iron Works. Engineer Charles E. Hyde of the company is also on board and she carried, too, the official board of inspection.

The Dahlgren's engines are looked after by Engineer James Hinkley, who is accounted one of the cleverest that ever got speed out of a vessel.

The Dahlgren has been designed and built throughout by the Bath Iron Works, the firm having, however, plans of a smaller and slower boat for their information and guidance.

For years France has led the world in torpedo-boat designs, and the Dahlgren, as she floats today, represents the experience and ability of France's greatest torpedo boat constructors, plus Yankee brains and ingenuity.

The machinery of the Dahlgren consists of two triple expansion engines, driving twin screws. The cylinders are 17, 25 and 37 inches in diameter, respectively, the stroke being 21 inches. It will be noticed that the stroke is from three to five inches longer than the usual torpedo boat engine; but this long stroke has many advantages, one being that it allows the revolutions to be kept down whereas 500 revolutions and 1200 feet piston speed are adopted for the speed of a torpedo boat engine, the Dahlgren's engines will turn up to only 325 revolutions at full power.

The board of inspection dined at the Rockingham, and returned to Bath this afternoon on the 2:40 train. The board comprises the following government officers: Commander W. E. Emery, chairman; Charles R. Roskey, Lieut. Com. Henderson and Naval Constructor Washington L. Capps.

This afternoon it was decided that the Dahlgren should not leave on her return trip to Bath until tomorrow morning.

Superintendent Hyde told a Herald reporter that the boat would come to this yard just as soon as the board accepted her for the government.

WHERE THEY COME FROM.

It seems a long distance for the barrels of Malaga grapes to travel to reach the consumers in this city. They are all from Spain and are shipped across the water in barrels all filled with ground cork, so that they are sold on this side as fresh as though they were right from the vines. The other grapes of the same shape of the Malaga but of a dark purple color come from the sunny side of California. About all the common grapes we are having at this season of the year are raised in New York. The Niagaras and the Delaware are to be obtained from New York, as well as the Catawbas, the Concord and Salets.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SALE.

Star Lodge of Odd Ladies Score Another Success.

On Thursday evening the sewing circle connected with the Star Lodge of Odd Ladies gave a sale and entertainment in Philbrick hall which proved a great success from every point of view.

The hall was very prettily decorated with the different booths and tables, brilliantly lighted, made a grand scene from the balcony. Fancy articles of every description, both useful and ornamental, aprons, and other nick-nacks, took up part of the tables, while candy, pop corn, cake and ice cream were in abundance and all found ready purchasers.

A pleasing entertainment was also given during the evening, the following being the programme:

Piano duet, Misses Greenwich and Goldsmith Reading, Miss Parsons Singing, Mabel McCallum Castanets, Mrs. Hall and Miss Martin Dancing, Ethel Shannon, Blanche Bell, Marion Brown, Etta Sides, Marion Davis, Lula Hudson and Charlie Towle Piano and Violin Duet, The Misses Pearce Reading, Hattie Walton Singing Quartette, Louise Hall, Marion Magraw, Helen Gladys Knowlton.

The success of the affair was due to the following committees:

Mrs. Charles Magraw, chairman of the general committee; Entertainment, Mrs. Hewitt;

THE HEART OF MARYLAND.

The Music hall stage was devoted on Thursday evening to David Belasco's familiar drama, The Heart of Maryland. A large audience appeared satisfied with the production. At the close of the third act the principals were called before the curtain, and for once the gallery habitues forgot to storm the villain with hissed when he stepped out for his share of the demonstration.

The cast was headed by Alma Kruger and Toff Johnson. The latter is really secondary, however, to Herman Bostwick, who handles the ungrateful role of Col. Fulton Thorpe, traitor to both the United States and Confederate flags. Mr. Johnson's is comparatively an ornamental part, and does not demand so much heavy work throughout the play as does that of Mr. Bostwick, who fully meets all the requirements of his lines and business.

Mr. Johnson has a fine stage presence and an effective voice, and makes a good hero. Mr. Bostwick is no stranger to the role that he assumes, for he was in the support of Mrs. Leslie Carter in the finest version of the piece ever staged.

A comparison between Miss Kruger and Mrs. Carter would be unfair. This slender, fair featured girl is without the mature experience of Mrs. Carter, but she impersonates the emotional Maryland Calvert well and impresses the audience as an attractive, sincere, impulsive southern sweetheart.

Miss Kruger rises to the occasion commendably in the crucial scenes and maintains generally such a high standard in her acting that the management of the company cannot be criticised for featuring her on its paper.

B. J. Murphy was at home as bluff, warm-hearted old General Kendrick. Walter Belasco is so clever in the off-hand part of "the ex-jailer at Pig wag" that his selection as one of Mrs. Carter's support, also, is no cause of wonderment. He is quite as good now as he was when with the former company.

William McLaughlin's creation of the old sexton's role is interesting and faithful to tradition. He was received with favor. Regan Huston as Lloyd Calvert, the spy, and W. W. Memminger as Lient. Telfair, fit in well.

Flora Kruger has no chance to prove her worth. Cute little Ethel Haines supplies some pleasant comedy. Florence Foster has an unimportant role.

There is too much mouthing of the lines, perhaps, and the details may not all unite for a perfect presentation, but it is an entertaining production.

The celebrated enfeoff scene was attempted quite acceptably. The noise of war was as thrilling as the rattling of paces and dropping of lead weights can be.
